

INTERNATIONAL POSTER CONTEST FOR YOUTH

2009-2010 "PROTECT MY OCEAN"

Contest deadline December 31, 2010

WYLAND FOUNDATION

Dheil Christian H. Desamero is Darl's brother. His work was chosen by judges for the SPECIAL CARING AWARD without knowing his relationship to his sister for whom the award was named.

In the more than 30 years since the INTERNATIONAL POSTER CONTEST FOR YOUTH and its allied environmental-educational organizations have been involved in seeking solutions to the problems of pollution and depletion of the world's marine resources, young people from all over this Planet Ocean have submitted entries. The world's natural resources are finite not infinite. World population will soon reach 6 billion people-a far cry from an estimated 138 million who inhabited the Earth 2000 years ago.

Clean oceans mean survival. Husbandry of the world's marine resources is basic for human and animal life. People also have a basic need to enjoy the beauty that surrounds them in nature. Even for those who live landlocked, far from the ocean, films and photographs of dolphins, whales and other sea dwellers bring enjoyment and awe.

Without fish, shellfish, marine algae and seaweed, life on Earth would be in great peril. Industrialized nations have taken the ability of marine resources to dilute dangerous chemical and biological wastes for granted. Dumping poisons into the marine environment has not only killed life directly, but toxins in the food chain have gotten into human food supplies and have caused health dangers.

Rain brings run off from the land into the oceans. Many products used as fertilizers are nutrients. They are nutrients for marine algae, which bloom, then die and disrupt life in the oceans when bacteria that feed on the dead algae deplete oxygen. There is a fragile balance in nature. Everything has its place even humankind.

With the theme PROTECT MY OCEAN, sponsors and organizers of the INTERNATIONAL POSTER CONTEST FOR YOUTH hope that contestants around the world will bring their creativity to bear on ways we can appreciate ocean dwellers. Everything in nature has a role to play in the overall survival of life on our planet. Creatures large and small inhabit the oceans of the world including great mammals such as whales, to tiny individual corals that build large colonies that help support life by creating reefs in relatively shallow water. Reefs become breeding grounds and habitats for smaller organisms that feed larger creatures.

Contestants should focus on their concerns for the ocean environment and ocean creatures using their imagination, knowledge and art to depict them alone or in their environment. Environmental issues can be described in the art as a focus of the creature's peril.

The world depends on the oceans for food and natural resources. Life in the oceans is menaced by human activities thus an appreciation for a healthy ocean environment is the theme of the 2009-2010 contest.

Contest Goals

To encourage young people everywhere to become aware of and share their concerns for the marine environment through poster art. Their messages will be brought to the widest possible audience to create a stronger commitment to protect the very environment on which all life on this planet depends.

Long-Term Goals

Contest organizers hope to encourage a sponsor in each nation to organize their own National Poster Contest and send the winning entries (3 secondary and 3 primary schools) to compete in the International Poster Contest for Youth.

Contest Rules

All posters submitted to the International Poster contest for Youth become the property of the contest organization and its sponsors and assigned all rights for reproduction, in all media not to exclude any print, film, video or electronically-transmitted medium as the organizers and their sponsors deem appropriate to further the goals of the contest. Special Caring Award

The IPCFY created a special medal award to remember one of the 2005-2006 winners. Darl Christin Harlan Desamero, 8 years old, a student in the 3rd grade of Immaculate Heart of Mary College in Quezon City, Philippines passed away without knowing that she had been awarded Honorable Mention for her beautiful depiction of a heart formed by two sharks. Contest organizers continue to honor Darl's memory with this SPECIAL CARING AWARD MEDAL in addition to the medals and awards provided winners. The DARL CHRISTIN HARLAN DESAMERO medal will be presented to the contestant who's work of art depicts that special love and caring concern so evident by Darl's life and love of the ocean realm. No special entry is required. The winner of this medal will be chosen from among general contest entries.
